Member of the Month

Dusty, Lucky, and Ned Reunited Again!

The attachment is a photo taken after receiving a membership to the cigar of the month club. A gift given at Christmas from my sister in law. After receiving the newsletter and seeing the photo on it, we wanted to add our two cents as well.

We have affectionately called it "Three amigo's" and forwarding it for review of your next publication of Cigar of the month.

Thank you,
Edward E. Dent

Featured Cigars

Napa Reserve by H. Upmann Corona

Founded in 1844 by Herman Upmann, a German banker, the brand was originally rolled in Cuba and then distributed by Mr. Upmann to his best customers as a promotion. Later, it became one of the most popular Cuban brands smoked in the world. Today, both the Cuban and Dominican versions are some of the most recognizable and highly rated cigars in the world. The Dominican version featured this month is an extra smooth, medium bodied cigar with a golden-brown, Connecticut shade wrapper and 3-year aged long leaf blend of Dominican and Brazilian fillers. This Napa Reserve Corona offers a creamy, delicious flavor with a bold and nutty character. Look for a smooth and lasting finish. Overall, a very enjoyable smoke. Consider pairing this one with a single malt scotch or brandy.

Petrus Anejo #3 Torpedo

The Felipe Gregorio line of cigars has come a long way since its rocky beginnings. The owner of this line, Philip Wynne, was born and raised in Switzerland and is the son of an American Foreign Service officer. Because he grew up in an area where Cuban cigars were legal, when he decided to get into the cigar business, he wanted to produce cigars similar to the many Cuban brands he grew up with...strong. At that time, Americans weren't used to strong cigars and so his first brand, Petrus, did not sell well in the States, but did do well in Europe and the Middle East. It was re-released in 2000 with a blend of aged Dominican Piloto Cubana and Brazilian Mata Finia tobaccos wrapped up with a beautiful dark Cameroon wrapper. This newer Petrus version is a bit toned down when compared to the original and has a subtle, but rich, satisfying flavor that really comes through near the finish. Look for a complex flavor comprised of rich spices, toasted caramel and leathery tones. Consider pairing it with a hoppy pale ale or just with a cup of coffee to start the day off.

Savinelli Nicaraguan Reserve #2 Churchill

The Savinelli Nicaraguan Reserve Maduro is handmade in Esteli, Nicaragua. Unlike most maduros, this cigar does not have a jet black wrapper; instead, it offers a unique medium brown, Habano seed Corojo wrapper. This Churchill is naturally fermented and cured, which gives this cigar it's smooth, attractive, and relatively thick textured wrapper.

This box pressed bad boy is a Nicaraguan Puro composed entirely of premium Nicaraguan long filler tobaccos. Look for a medium to full bodied smoke with a bit of a floral character. We found the flavor to be identifiably Nicaraguan, note a dense, earthy flavor with a relatively light sweetness. The finish is relatively mild and doesn't hang around too long. We'd suggest you pair it up with a Porfidio Anejo Margarita on the rocks.

Trilogy Authentic Corojo Robusto

Alec Bradley is the mastermind behind the Trilogy. This is a triangle pressed shaped robusto that just wants to stay in your hand. It's the perfect shape for smoking. Just like the name depicts, this Corojo Robusto is one of a series of three cigars, which also includes the Native Cameroon and the Exotic

Maduro. The Authentic Corojo is a beautifully rich and deep dark burgundy-brown color. It obtains this color from the authentic first generation Cuban Corojo tobacco. Look for a medium bodied smoke with lots of flavor and complexity, including hints of pepper, an herbal earthiness, and coffee followed up with a dry, woody aftertaste. Overall, a fantastic cigar. Tremendously rich, bold, and packed with flavor. Consider pairing it with a single malt scotch or an XO cognac.

Cacique Family Martin Box-Pressed Robusto

Cacique (pronounced "ka-seek") enjoys a loyal following, yet isn't widely known, despite a 90 rating by Cigar Aficionados Insider and high praise from the cigar smoking public. Made by cigar master Pedro Martin, this cigar is a real diamond in the rough. Cacique is handmade in the Dominican Republic, using a long-filler blend of Nicaraguan Ligero and Dominican Seco leaves, Havana seed binder, and a very attractive Connecticut Shade wrapper. This combination lends the cigar a full flavor, yet remains mild in strength. It is very well-constructed and extensively aged. A cigar with a pleasant, herbal character and a mild-to-medium body. There are good spicy elements on the palate - a well-made cigar with an oily wrapper. It has a spicy core of flavors. The aftertaste was a mild and somewhat spicy experience. We'd suggest pairing it with your favorite Pale Ale or Chardonnay.
